RE: CHANGES TO REPORTING PERIOD FOR CHARITIES

I am pleased to announce that the Alberta Gaming and Liquor Commission recently conducted a review of the current practices associated with financial reporting.

Over the years, AGLC has heard feedback from stakeholders on whether consideration would be given on implementing a fixed date for charitable organizations submitting all financial reports. Charitable organizations have expressed that they found it challenging to submit multiple reports during the year due to administrative pressures, to even simply remembering submission due dates.

In response, AGLC is pleased to provide a "single date mail out" for financial reporting. What this means is that charitable organizations will receive all gaming financial reports in one package with an assigned reporting end date, except for raffles less than $10,000. This change in financial reporting will make it easier for charitable organizations to send multiple reports at one time throughout the year.

These changes to financial reporting reflect the AGLC's continued value and appreciation of the province's charitable and religious organizations who are involved with a variety of projects in various communities throughout Alberta. The AGLC is committed to ensuring that the charitable gaming model continues to serve the best interest of Albertans and protect the charitable benefit.

For more information on the new changes in financial reporting, please refer to the attached Question and Answer document with this letter. Should you have any further questions, please contact Darrell Skarban, Manager, Financial Review, at 780-447-8600 or email at darrell.skarban@aglc.ca .
